Dear Friend,

I'm writing this letter to someone who I may never meet. I believe that despite all that has happened between us, we may meet one day and I also believe that there will be peace.

I agree with the thoughts in your letter and see the resolution of the conflict only through negotiations and peaceful means. I was glad to realize that there are young people who think like me, and it awakened a sense of peace in me. You mention in your letter that I can't show you my house and say, "I live there! Come inside and let's drink a tea, I have so much to tell you!"

In fact, it is not so. I wish that day comes at least as much as you do. The common thoughts in our letters is a call for peace. I believe that our example will make a change in the future and will end all forms of violence, conflict, and hatred.

To Anais,

From Tofik
